E. W. GREENE IN A STEEPLE STUNT.

Stands On His Head On a Steeple Pinnacle Giving Thrills to Onlookers Below.

A MOST DARING FEAT RECALLED.

* * *

Those Daytonians who have all these years admired the sober, dignified bearing of ex-Mayor E. W. Greene as he has gone in and out among them hardly think he was ever the man to perform steeple-height feats that made the hearts of observers hundreds of feet below stand still, while he stood on his head in the dizzy atmosphere above looking for all the world like an automatic toy, the while displaying as little concern for his own safety as if he were performing a street-walk on a pile of straw, or "skinning a cat" from the grape vine swing.

You didn't know the agile, lithe "Bigelow" Greene of the late sixties. The following reminiscent touch from the Portsmouth, Ohio, Daily Blade, of recent date, throws a side light on young Greene:

"The tearing down of the Sixth street spire reminds Ed Cordell, of the Blade counting room, of something that occurred when the finishing touches were being put on the spire, in 1868. Mr. Cordell and others were standing in the opposite street corner watching the work, and making comments about the danger attending such a job. Among the persons in the crowd was Eugene Greene, a young carpenter's apprentice. Greene didn't agree with those who thought the work was attended with danger.

"'Why,' said he, 'I will go up there and stand on my head on the pinnacle of the spire, if I say will be me.'

"They gave him the laugh, and passed the matter by. Already, however, Greene was crossing the street in the direction of the church, but no one took his words seriously, and they passed the matter up. Greene disappeared inside of the vestibule of the church. The spire was finished, with the exception of placing the rod upholding the weathervane in position and to the spectators below, as it does today, it appeared to come to a point. The sisters were still at work. Presently Greene was seen to emerge from the small window on the east side of the tower near the apex, the same window that the people were watching today when the Steeple Jack came out and made his performance.

"Greene climbed the isolated frame work to the pinnacle, and it is the honor of all did just what he said he would, he stood on his head, and made clownish motions with his legs. He came down and said it was just as easy and safe to standing on one's feet on the ground.

"Eugene Greene was a nephew of the late Charles S. Greene, and a cousin of Mrs. H. Frank Thompson. He married Miss Hattie Dewolfe a Baptist minister's daughter, stationed here, went South, and is now an orange grower in Florida, a subscriber to the Blade, is happy and prosperous. He has quit standing on his head."

Mrs. Merritt and children, of Harwood, have been down on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Carl Wehner.

DR. PIERSON FALLS A BIG BUCK.

A Party of Four Play Havoc With The Antlered Tribe of The Tomoka.

SQUIRRELS AND QUAIL A-PLENTY.

* * *

Dr. J. H. Pierson, G. Wallenus and nephew, F. Tenney, with Jno. Roberts as guide, spent four days in the jungles and savannas of the upper Tomoka with most satisfactory results to the party. They wrote in all kinds of game, which they located in any numbers. Dr. Pierson reports having seen ten deer himself and he had the good luck to bring down the biggest buck killed which dressed out 160 lbs. There were three deer killed by the party.

As for smaller game it was found in abundance. They got all the squirrels and quail they cared for and could have killed turkeys but didn't want them.

They went by automobile up to Harwood trail and from this point the search for game commenced. Roberts had a splendid pack of hounds which were on to the job and kept the denizens of the forest on the move. The party were altogether fifteen deer which the dogs had in motion.

Caught Big Sheepshead.

Harry Hough, John Milligan and R. J. Malby returned yesterday from a several days' hunting and fishing trip in the vicinity of Eldora. The party started out last Thursday in Mr. Malby's launch, the "Teal." They had a very pleasant outing, secured all the ducks they wanted and caught a quantity of fish, among them being several unusually large sheepshead, the largest of which measured twenty-four inches in length. They made the home run in three hours and forty-five minutes.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Dec. 22.—The utter elimination of President Castro from the political life of Venezuela is accepted as an accomplished fact by Venezuelans everywhere, according to advices that reached here today from Caracas. H. D. TAFT AT THE COLONNADES.

AT HOME A NUTMEG PEDAGOGUE.

* * *

Daytona and Seabreeze have a rather distinguished guest these days in the person of Horace D. Taft, brother of President-elect William H. Taft, who, with his wife, are here from Watertown, Conn., to spend the holidays, being early season guests at the Colonnades.

Mr. Taft and his wife will be here only a few days, expecting to leave Christmas day in order to be in Boston in time to attend a meeting there before he returns to Watertown to "get back on the job," as Mr. Taft put it. He is headmaster of the Taft School at Watertown, one of the students there now being Charles Taft, youngest son of the president-elect.

Wm. H. Taft and his brother made the southern trip together, the former going to Augusta, where he is at present. Horace D. will be unable to join his brother on the trip to Tampa because of his work in the east.

Horace D. Taft looks very much like his popular brother, but is taller. He does not carry the avoirdupois the cartoonists generally give to Wm. H.

When interviewed by a News reporter Mr. Taft said that he considered the chances of his brother, Charles P. Taft, of the Cincinnati Times-Star, for the United States senate from Ohio, to be exceedingly good, although, as he said, some new things are mighty doubtful.

Daytona may feel quite honored because of the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Taft have come all the way from Connecticut just to spend a week in the city. They are enjoying themselves in Daytona and vicinity, taking long drives every day. Yesterday the itinerary included Port Orange and New Smyrna. They were accompanied on the drive that when the distinguished brother is told of he may be invited upon to come and make a protracted visit himself.

The visit of Professor Howard Taft is probably the sequel of a visit a few months ago by the mother of the distinguished family of boys to Daytona. Mrs. Taft spent a season at the Troy House and many recall the visit of the mother whose sons are now so prominent in the political world.

Her visit was cut short in Daytona by the appointment of her son, Mr. Taft, the present as Governor General of the Philippines, she made a hasty trip home to Cincinnati in order to bid her son goodbye before his departure for the far East.

A PRINTER ON HUNT OF TROUBLE.

John B. Buckner of the Daily News Force, Invests in a Benzine Buggy.

HIKES OFF MERRILY BONKING.

* * *

It is a safe bet that wonders never will cease. John B. Buckner, one of the old guard of the print-shop gang, who has worn out more shoe soles tramping over the country right saving and incidentally practicing the "art preservative," than there are razorbacks in Volusia county, has become inoculated with the fast company germ, doffed his Stetson top piece to his old comrades and is out on the boulevard, touching only the high points and speeding like lubricated electricity through a country telephone system.

John Belshazzar Buckner will be with the Ormond Hotel printery this winter and with his new purchase in commission he will hob-nob with Gotham's gay and debonair.

About the time the robins begin to nest again in the apple trees in old Kentucky John Belshazzar says he will hike northward. He proposes to make a little on the side by swinging two big placards on either side of his hunk-bonker advertising Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck (on the inside pe-ru-na will be advertised). If this little stunt is pulled off in good shape he thinks he may later swing clear around the circle working in by turns (with pe-ru-na) Europe, Asia, Orup, Inup and Stirup!

He will reduce expenses in the absence of garages in which to run for repairs by using roller composition for tires.

He departed quietly and chipper-saying he might do such a thing as seek a state of connubial bliss. It might be well to remind the gay old jark that old maids and widows are not now searching for such remnants of the bargain counter, and befriend some fair young old maid these days keeps a parrot that can rise like a lark Taf, a monkey that can chew, smoke and drink, and a cat that stays out all night, one can hardly see what use she could make of John Belshazzar.

GUXHAVEN, Germany, Dec. 22—The British cotton steamer Irada from Galveston to Liverpool was wrecked today at Point Mizzenhead, her captain and six of the crew being drowned; other members of the crew were thrown on the rocks, several being fatally hurt.

A PRINTER ON HUNT OF TROUBLE.

John B. Buckner of the Daily News Force, Invests In a Benzine Buggy.

HIKES OFF MERRILY HONKING.

It is a safe bet that wonders never will cease. John B. Buckner, one of the old guard of the print-shop gang, who has worn out more shoe soles tramping over the country sight-seeing, and incidentally practicing the "art preservative," than there are razorbacks in Volusia county, has become inoculated with the fast company germ, doffed his Stetson top piece to his old comrades and is out on the boulevard, touching only the high points and speeding like lubricated electricity through a country telephone system.

John Belshazzar Buckner will be with the Ormond Hotel printery this winter and with his new purchase in commission he will hob-nob with Gotham's gay and debonair.

About the time the robins begin to nest again in the apple trees in old Kentucky John Belshazzar says he will hike northward. He proposes to make a little on the side by swinging two big placards on either side of his honk-honker advertising Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck (on the inside pe-ru-na will be advertised). If this little stunt is pulled off in good shape he thinks he may later swing clear around some meridian taking in by turns (with pe-ru-na) Europe, Arop, Orop, Irop and Stirrup!

He will reduce expenses in the absence of garages in which to run for repairs by using roller composition for tires.

He departed jauntily and chipper, saying he might do such a thing as seek a state of connubial bliss. It might be well to remind the gay old lark that old maids and widows are not now searching for such remnants of the bargain counter, and besides since the average old maid these days keeps a parrot that can cuss like a Jack Tar, a monkey that can chew, smoke and drink, and a cat that stays out all night, one can hardly see what use she could make of John Belshazzar.

The Francisco Looked Innocent.
Some time since, in a THOMAS street car in Boston, a servant girl from Providence brushed against a pretty trifle of rose water bottle attached to a fan and surrounded in getting several more dainty pieces out of it than had gone into the making. The Providence girl, the admitted Providence noble and politely explained that the broken vase must be paid for. Monsour finished a handful of small silver and copper money through, from his pocket, and was told that was the value of the trifle.

"Mon Dieu," cried the Parisian, "It is France." At this he took out his bill book and discovered a fifty dollar note from Brazil, which the Bostonian instantly seized upon, to the supreme disgust of its owner.

After declaring the value of the vase the Parisian handed the man his change and dismissed him with a flourishing bowing. The express train started the lamb in due time, with full directions as Bridgeport, and the noble Miss Francisco had departed westward with the swallows.—Boston Times Magazine.

Followed Suit.

On the day of the admission of N. Bertrand to the French academy the author of "Cyrano" and "L'Aiglon" gave a breakfast in a few of his friends, the guest of honor being Mme. Bernhardt. The actress was dressed in a handsome gown, which had been made especially for the occasion. At the end of the breakfast she arose and in an impressive manner took a glass, held it high and said, "I drink to the success of Edmond Rostand, M. Bertrand, and I drink after the Greek manner." She then poured the contents of her glass over her head and neck.

Two of Rostand's small sons were sitting at a side table wearing new velvet suits, also made for the occasion. The children watched Mme. Bernhardt's dramatic tribute the elder of the boys arose and, imitating her manner, said, "I drink to the greatest of my father's friends and I also drink after the Greek fashion," and straightway plunged himself and his small brother into the contents of his glass.

A Scene Not in a Play.

An extraordinary scene took place in the Petticoat Theatre, London, on the 5th inst. when Miss Ada Clarice Lindon's every part "Under Two Lords" in Motif," Oct. 4, 1902. During the piece a large quantity of water was thrown over the stage, which took the part of Juvenile, the character doomed to death by the warblers. One of the artists, Mr. Trevitt, of the Mercator Advertising Co., Ltd., London, who had only recently joined the management's service, "flew" himself across the stage, and the action of the wires, and the action of the water on his clothes, caused the latter to collapse. This was added to the fun for the audience. The leader of the orchestra, Mr. Lindon, playing the part of Tom Bellamy, and who made a most pathetic speech, in which he promptly fainted away upon the present, which was the event that the theatre was left seriously short of water. The play however, turned out to be a popular success and took for three days, the photographic fun of the performance.

Shyness.

Mrs. Bowser—Our neighbors are very unfriendly people. Mr. Bowser—How do you know? Mrs. Bowser—Because they never invite us to anything that they have.

Compensation.

Friend—It must be very much larger of the town. It must be quite a city. Young Homebuyer—Oh, no. The town is small things that are big on the street level.

The Frenchman Looked Innocent.

Some time since, in a Tremont street store in Boston, a nervous little Frenchman brushed against a pretty trifle of vase ware valued at about $14 and succeeded in getting several score more pieces out of it than had gone into its making. The floorwalker led the almshed Parisian aside and politely explained that the broken vase must be paid for. Monsieur fetched a handful of small silver and copper, mostly foreign, from his pocket when he was told the value of the trifle.

"Mon Dieu," cried the Parisian, "by francs!" At this he took out his bill book and discovered a fifty dollar express draft, which the floorwalker instantly seized upon, to the unspeakable horror of its owner.

After deducting the value of the vase the former handed the man his change and dismissed him with a floorwalker's blessing. The express draft reached the bank in due time, with four others as fraudulent, but the voluble little Frenchman had departed southward with the swallows.—Bohemian Magazine.

Followed Suit.

On the day of the admission of M. Bostand to the French academy the author of "Cyrano" and "L'Aiglon" gave a breakfast to a few of his friends, the guest of honor being Mme. Bernhardt. The actress was dressed in a handsome gown, which had been made expressly for the occasion. At the end of the breakfast she arose and in an impressive manner took a glass, held it high and said, "I drink to the greatest of French dramatists, M. Bostand, and I drink after the Greek manner!" She then poured the contents of her glass over her head and gown.

Two of Bostand's small sons were sitting at a side table wearing new velvet suits, also made for the occasion. In the silence which followed Bernhardt's dramatic tribute the elder of the boys arose and, imitating her manner, said, "I drink to the greatest of poets, my papa, and I also drink in the Greek fashion!" and straightway deluged himself and his small brother with the contents of his glass.

A Scene Not in a Play.

An extraordinary scene took place in the Princess' theater, London, on the night of the first production of Charles Reade's great play, "Never Too Late to Mend," Oct. 4, 1865. During the prison scene a large quantity of water was thrown over Miss Moore, who took the part of Josephine, the character done to death by the warders. One of the critics, Mr. Tinslin of the Morning Advertiser, rose from his seat, and publicly protested against the unnecessary cruelty. This created almost a riot among the audience, and the action of the play was stopped for some considerable time. Fuel was added to the fire by George Vining, the lessee of the theater, who was playing the part of Tom Robinson and who made a most impudent speech, in which he practically insulted every critic present, with the result that the theater was left severely alone by the press for many months. The play however, turned out to be a popular success and had, for those days, the phenomenal run of 140 performances.

Shiftless.

Mrs. Borrow—Our neighbors are very shiftless people. Mr. Borrow—How do you know? Mrs. Borrow—When I go over to borrow anything they never have it.

Consonation.

Friend—If your washerwoman charges by the piece, it must be rather expensive. Young Housekeeper—Oh, no! She loses so many things that her bills are never high.

A KINGS' CARRIAGE.

Old Fashioned and Elaborate Vehicle Used in England.

England's state carriage is one of the most costly and splendid in the world. It was built in 1761 at a cost of $20,000 on the occasion of the marriage of George III, and has ever since carried the English kings and queens on all high state occasions. Sir William Chambers designed the vehicle, which weighs four tons.

Despite its many years' service its great wheels, gear and body are said to be as sound as when built, and it looks as if it would go on forever. Steel springs were unknown when the coach was built, and the pendrons of dainty, luxurious body is suspended on leather braces, not unlike those of the old Concord stagecoaches of America. Its balance is so perfect that a touch of the finger is enough to set the body swinging on the big creaking straps which brace the carved and gilded trifons supporting the driver's seat and hammer cloth. The length of the vehicle is twenty-four feet, and it is twelve feet high.

The elaborate carvings cost more than the carriage proper, the coach builder's bill having been less than $9,000, while that of the carver was more than $10,000. Something of the character of the ornamentation may be guessed from the fact that the artist Cipriani received $1,500 for painting the panels and that the late maker's charge was about $4,000, the crimson satin interior of the carriage being most elaborately upholstered.

The preparation of the royal equipage for state occasions is a real sight. Six pairs of milk white horses from the royal stud are always used, and all wear false tails. The coachman, in powder and curls, mounts his seat with the aid of a ladder, but does not really drive, postilions on the horses and state grooms who walk beside them being in command of the team.—Philadelphia Press.

YOUNG COCOANUTS.

The Trick of Opening Them as Practiced by the Tahitians.

"Breaking a cocoanut is one of the simplest looking operations in the world, but I have not seen the white man who could do it effectively," writes Beatrice Grimshaw in her book, "In the Strange South Seas." Every native of Tahiti is apparently born with the trick.

A stick is sharply pointed at both ends, and one end is firmly set in the ground. The nut is taken in both hands and struck with a biting and tearing movement combined on the point of the stick, so as to split the thick, intensely tough covering of dense coir fiber that protects the nut.

The nut comes forth white as ivory, about the same shape and size as the brown old nuts that go by ship to England and America, but much younger and more tender, for only the smallest of the old nuts, which are not wanted in the islands for copra making, are generally exported.

A large knife is used to crack the top of the nut all around, like an egg shell, and the drink is ready, a cupful of pure water, slightly sweet and just a little aerated, if the nut has been plucked at the right stage.

There is no pleasanter or more refreshing fruit in the world, and it has not the least likeness to the "milk" contained in the cocoanuts of commerce. No native would drink the old nuts for fear of illness, as they are considered both unpleasant and unwholesome. Only the milk of half grown nuts is used for drinking, and even these will sometimes hold a couple of pints of liquid.

The water of the young cocoanut is food and drink in one, having much nourishing matter held in solution. On many a long day of hot and weary travel I had cause to bless the refreshing and reviving properties of nature's best gift to man in the tropics, the never failing cocoanut.

Settled the Ownership.

"There was a quaint old judge who used to live in the 'Pine Tree State,' said a lawyer. "One of his decisions gained him the title of the 'Maine Solomon.' Two women came before this magistrate with a fine, fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily at the first woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?' he asked her. 'No, indeed, it don't, sir,' she replied. Then he turned to the other woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?' 'It certainly does not,' the second woman replied.

"'The pullet,' the magistrate then decreed, 'does not belong to Mrs. Jones, nor does it belong to Mrs. Smith. The pullet is mine. Janitor, take it round to the house and give it to my cook.'"

A Great Change.

First Gentleman (entering the apartment of second gentleman)—About a year ago you challenged me to fight a duel. Second Gentleman (sternly)—I did, sir. First Gentleman—And I told you that I had just got married and I did not care to risk my life at any hazard. Second Gentleman (haughtily)—I remember, sir. First Gentleman (bitterly)—Well, my feelings have changed. Any time you want to fight let me know.—Human Life.

NEWS OF THE HOTELS

The Ridgewood.

The arrivals at The Ridgewood yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. William F. Palmer, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Wentworth, Chicago; Fred C. Smith and wife, Chicago; Walter West, Trenton, N. J.; Claude Nolan, Jacksonville; E. E. Price, Groton, Conn.

Despland Hotel.

C. E. Rapelliue and wife and Paul N. Friedlander, of New York City, arrived at The Despland yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Dunn, of East Orange, N. J., accompanied by Mrs. Curtis, of Nantucket, were on a delightful trip yesterday to New Smyrna and other points, including Port Orange. The trip was made by automobile.

The Bennett.

The past week has been an active one at The Bennett. Numerous arrivals have marked each day until now the hotel is more than half filled. The evenings have been passed most pleasantly, music, bridge and picture puzzles (a new diversion) absorbing the attention of the gentler sex, while old fashioned whist engages the attention of the gentlemen in the smoking rooms.

An enjoyable trip by automobile was made to Hawk's park yesterday. H. S. Houston, accompanied by Mrs. Houston entertained as their guests Miss Oliva Caskey and A. H. Lane.

Another pleasant trip yesterday was made to Ormond and the beach by Mrs. J. S. Foster and Mrs. Milton Huber. Others in the party were Miss F. M. Hall and Mrs. E. D. Kiplinger.

C. A. Horn and R. A. Houston, the fishermen, continue to bring in big fishcatches and many delicious dishes have been prepared by the house chef. Miss Oliva Caskey has had splendid luck with the rod and reel and is one of Daytona's enthusiastic anglers. Miss Caskey is also one of the riding set of Daytona and will be seen on the riding and bridle paths often this season.

Mrs. Emma Odell of Philadelphia, Pa., arrived Daytona Sunday night and is sojourning at The Bennett for the winter months. Mrs. Odell's aunt will join her shortly at The Bennett.

"TELL HER SHE MUST."

The Doctor's Mistake, Which Was Corrected by the Married Man.

The family physician puffed meditatively at his cigar for a few minutes before coming down to business.

"I have been to see your wife, as you requested," he said at last, "and I asked you to come to me that I could tell you what should be done. She's in a pretty bad way."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. An irregular sickness, you know, but generally run down and in bad shape. With rest and care she'll come out all right, but you'll have to look after her pretty closely."

"I get pretty close to her, doctor."

"I see you'll have to look after her pretty closely. You'll have to absolve yourself sort of general overseer of or percher of her affairs pertaining to her welfare for a time and be very strict with her too. In the first place tell her she must—"

"Doctor, are you acquainted with my wife?" interrupted the husband.

"Not intimately at all," replied the intended physician. "I've been out of town for a long time—out of Cuba, as you know, but that is all."

"Possibly that may be urged as an excuse," said the husband, "but it's not a particularly good one. There are women with whom you are quite well acquainted, are there not?"

"Certainly."

"Married women?"

"Many of them."

"And still you advise me to tell my wife that she must do something or other?"

The physician looked at the husband, and the husband looked at the physician.

"My dear sir," said the physician at last, "I believe some men do talk to their wife that way, but I see you are a man of judgment and sense who prefers the truth to all else. Of course what I meant was that you might do well to point your wife that if it is in accord with her judgment possibly it might be a good thing to follow the advice that I will now give you. Nothing, being married, I know as well as you that 'must' is a word that ought to be eliminated from the English language or at the most confined to the intercourse of parents with children."—Exchange.

Indulgent.

"I have such an indulgent husband," said little Mrs. Doll.

"Yes, as George says," responded Mrs. Spinful. "Sometimes indulges a little too much, doesn't he?"—London Tit-Bits.

A KINGS' CARRIAGE.

Old Fashioned and Elaborate Vehicle Used in England.

England's state carriage is one of the most costly and splendid in the world. It was built in 1761 at a cost of $36,000 on the occasion of the marriage of George III. and has ever since carried the English kings and queens on all high state occasions. Sir William Chambers designed the vehicle, which weighs four tons.

Despite its many years' service its great wheels, gear and body are said to be as sound as when built, and it looks as if it would go on forever. Steel springs were unknown when the coach was built, and its ponderous yet dainty, luxurious body is suspended on leather braces, not unlike those of the old Concord stagecoaches of America. Its balance is so perfect that a touch of the finger is enough to set the body swinging on the big creaking straps which brace the carved and gilded tritons supporting the driver's seat and hammer cloth. The length of the vehicle is twenty-four feet, and it is twelve feet high.

The elaborate carvings cost more than the carriage proper, the coach builder's bill having been less than $9,000, while that of the carver was more than $10,000. Something of the character of the ornamentation may be guessed from the fact that the artist Cipriani received $1,500 for painting the panels and that the late maker's charge was about $4,000, the crimson satin interior of the carriage being most elaborately upholstered.

The preparation of the royal equipage for state occasions is a real sight. Six pairs of milk white horses from the royal stud are always used, and all wear false tails. The coachman, in powder and curls, mounts his seat with the aid of a ladder, but does not really drive, postilions on the horses and state grooms who walk beside them being in command of the team.—Philadelphia Press.

YOUNG COCOANUTS.

The Trick of Opening Them as Practiced by the Tahitians.

"Husking a cocoanut is one of the simplest looking operations in the world, but I have not seen the white man who could do it effectively," writes Beatrice Grimshaw in her book, "In the Strange South Seas." Every native of Tahiti is apparently born with the trick.

A stick is sharply pointed at both ends, and one end is firmly set in the ground. The nut is then taken in the hands and struck with a hitting and tearing movement combined on the point of the stick, so as to split the thick, intensely tough covering of dense coir fiber that protects the nut.

The nut comes forth white as ivory, about the same shape and size as the brown old nuts that go by ship to England and America, but much younger and more tender, for only the smallest of the old nuts, which are not wanted in the islands for copra making, are generally exported

A large knife is used to crack the top of the nut all around, like an eggshell, and the drink is ready, a draft of pure water, slightly sweet and just a little aerated, if the nut has been plucked at the right stage.

There is no pleasanter or more refreshing draft in the world, and it has not the least likeness to the "milk" contained in the cocoanuts of commerce. No native would drink from old nuts for fear of illness, as they are considered both unpleasant and unwholesome. Only the milk of half grown nuts is used for drinking, and even these will sometimes hold a couple of pints of liquid.

The water of the young cocoanut is food and drink in one, having much nourishing matter held in solution. On many a long day of hot and weary travel I had cause to bless the refreshing and restoring powers of heaven's best gift to man in the tropics, the never failing cocoanut.

Settled the Ownership.

"There was a quaint old judge who used to live in the Pine Tree State," said a lawyer. "One of his decisions gained him the title of the 'Maine Solomon.' Two women came before this magistrate with a fine, fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily at the first woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?' he asked her. 'No, indeed, it don't, sir,' she replied. Then he turned to the other woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?' 'It certainly does not,' the second woman replied.

"'The pullet,' the magistrate then decreed, 'does not belong to Mrs. Jones, nor does it belong to Mrs. Smith. The pullet is mine. Janitor, take it round to the house and give it to my cook.'"

A Great Change.

First Gentleman (entering the apartment of second gentleman)—About a year ago you challenged me to fight a duel. Second Gentleman (sternly)—I did, sir. First Gentleman—And I told you that I had just got married and I did not care to risk my life at any hazard. Second Gentleman (haughtily)—I remember, sir. First Gentleman (bitterly)—Well, my feelings have changed. Any time you want to fight let me know.—Human Life.

Placing Him.

"May I ask you what your profession is?"

"Certainly. I cure people of the blues by hypnotic power."

"Oh, I see. You're what you might call a cheerupodist."

The Bennett.

The past week has been an active one at The Bennett. Numerous arrivals have marked each day until now the hotel is more than half filled. The evenings have been passed most pleasantly, music, bridge and picture puzzles (a new diversion) absorbing the attention of the gentler sex, while old fashioned whist engages the attention of the gentlemen in the smoking rooms.

An enjoyable trip by automobile was made to Hawk's park yesterday. H. S Houston, accompanied by Mrs. Houston entertained as their guests Miss Oliva Caskey and A. H. Lane.

Another pleasant trip yesterday was made to Ormond and the beach by Mrs. J. S. Forster and Mrs. Milton Huber. Others in the party were Miss F. M. Hall and Mrs E. D. Kiplinger.

C. A. Horn and R. A. Houston, the fishermen, continue to bring in big catches and many delicious dishes have been prepared by the house chef. Miss Oliva Caskey has had splendid luck with the rod and is one of Daytona's enthusiastic anglers. Miss Caskey is also one of the riding set of Daytona and will be seen on the riding and bridle paths often this season.

"TELL HER SHE MUST."

The Doctor's Mistake, Which Was Corrected by the Married Man.

The family physician puffed meditatively at his cigar for a few minutes before coming down to business.

"I have been to see your wife, as you requested," he said at last, "and I asked you to come in so that I could tell you what should be done. She's in a pretty bad way."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. No regular sickness, you know, but generally run down and in bad shape. With rest and care she'll come out all right, but you'll have to look after her pretty closely."

"I beg your pardon"

"I say you'll have to look after her pretty closely. You'll have to appoint yourself sort of general overseer or supervisor of every thing pertaining to her welfare for a time and be very strict with her too. In the first place tell her she must"—

"Doctor, are you acquainted with my wife?" interrupted the husband.

"Not intimately at all," replied the astonished physician. "I've been called upon to treat her once or twice, as you know, but that is all."

"Possibly that may be urged as an excuse," said the husband, "but it's not a particularly good one. There are women with whom you are quite well acquainted, are there not?"

"Certainly."

"Married women?"

"Many of them."

"And still you advise me to tell my wife that she must do something or other?"

The physician looked at the husband, and the husband looked at the physician.

"My dear sir," said the physician at last, "it flatters some men to talk to them that way, but I see you are a man of judgment and sense who prefers the truth to all else. Of course what I mean is that you ought to suggest to your wife that if it is in accord with her judgment possibly it might be a good thing to follow the advice that I will now give you. Naturally, being married, I know as well as you that 'must' is a word that ought to be eliminated from the English language or at the most confined to the intercourse of parents with children."—Exchange.

Indulgent.

"I have such an indulgent husband," said little Mrs. Doll.

"Yes, so George says," responded Mrs. Spiteful. "Sometimes indulges a little too much, doesn't he?"—London Tit-Bits.

Queer English Laws.

"No statute law of England ever can be obsolete," a legal journal says. "Once enacted, it continues in binding force until repealed."

It would be really the case, there ought to be some lively times ahead for several classes of the community. For instance, what will soldiers have to say to the act which penalizes any person who enters a house without striking to it at least four acres of land? This was one of "good Queen Bess'" laws, and it has never certainly never been repealed.

By another unrepealed statute, which dates back to the first year of King James I., it is enacted that not more than a penny may be charged for a quart of the best ale nor more than a halfpenny for a like quantity of small beer. The penalty for each infraction of the act is 20 shillings, so that if it were rigidly enforced it would not need, apparently, a licensing bill to rein the brewers. Then, again, a Catholic owning a bottle is still legally obliged to sell it for £5 to anybody who chooses to offer that sum for it.—London Graphic.

The First Mourning Paper.

The oldest known letter written on black edged note paper as a sign of mourning appears to be one dated Jan. 2, 1665. In Addison's comedy of "The Drummer" 1716, reference is made to the fashion in the words: "My lady's mourning paper has a border at the edge." A few years after Addison, Hearne, who died in 1726, speaks in one of his poems of "the white bordered sheet" as a messenger of sorrow. Hearn, writing from Rome to Horace Walpole in 1740, says that it was usually used in Florence at that time. The superior elegance of the Italian note paper with its narrow margin of black originated in ready acceptance in this country where it superseded the entire sheet with a black border sometimes a quarter of an inch wide. In this way it probably grew in importance to the fashion. But it is a mistake to suppose as some have done that the fashion was introduced from Paris.—London Standard.

Caught Alive.

A New Yorker, a big game hunter of many years' experience, was last shooting in Uganda. He had several luck. Nearly every day he would in a contemptuous attitude beside a freshly killed lion, and the photographer snapped him for the magazines.

One afternoon the photographer, who was taking a nap in the tent, was awakened by a loud noise. He rose and looked out. Returning toward him from the jungle, his gun and cartridge flying, came the chief, and with terrible roars and growls, a huge lion bounded at his heels.

The photographer gazed spellbound at the strange and exciting picture. The chief, perceiving him, shouted:

"Quick, quick! Open the door, George! I'm bringing him home alive!"—Washington Star.

Spoiling a Tragedy.

"If you don't marry me," he said tragically, "I shall kill myself."

"And write a note telling all about it?" queried the maid.

"Yes."

"And hold my photograph in your other hand?"

"I had thought about it."

"Well, just wait a minute," she said, "and I'll borrow pa's pistol for you. My, but won't it be romantic?"

But he failed.

A Force Proportioned to Its Frame.

The war of 1812 has proved that our free government, like other free governments though new in its early movements, acquires in its progress a force proportioned to its frame and that the Union of these states, the guardians of the freedom and the safety of all and of each, is strengthened by every occasion that puts it to the test. —James Madison.

An Ancient Joke of Which There Are Many Modern Versions.

The following tale was translated from a very old Chinese book for Collier's Weekly:

A certain magistrate upon opening the court observed one of his lictors whose face was covered with wounds and asked him what was the matter. Replied the lictor, "Yesterday evening I was walking and enjoying the fresh air under my grape arbor, which was suddenly upset by a gust of wind and fell on me and caused these injuries."

But the judge was displeased and said: "That is no lie. It is easy to see that the marks on your face are from scratches from nails. It must be that you have had a row with your wife and got a clawing from her. Is this not so?"

The lictor crossed all over and replied, "Your honor has truly guessed it."

Then said the judge: "Why is your wife so fierce to you? Will I summon her and give her a hearing and see your strength."

While he was yet speaking the judge's own wife suddenly came out from the house and bowed and said, "Who is the one you are going to jail?"

The magistrate hastily commanded to the lictors and "Tang" it to "Tang" court would adjourned. Suppose to-morrow it seems as though the court's grape arbor is also about to collapse."

A special meeting of the City Council was held last night to arrange the details of special assessment certificates to cover the cost of sidewalks which have been built by the city.

Burglar Green opened his Beach street bowling alleys formally on the middle yesterday afternoon, when the alleys were used by a number of ladies. It is probable that a number of ladies' nights of the alleys will be given bowling clubs to fill games exclusively during the season. A bowling contest will be held Christmas afternoon, when a number of prizes will be offered, some for individual scores and some for team scores.
